Driving toward the future

O n Sep. 26, California joined Nevada and Florida to become the third state to pass legislation in the past two years part due to the lobbying efforts of Google; many other states are also beginning to push similar legislation, though Governor Rick Scott cedes budgetary concerns as the reason for the state's apprehension. However, this is a momentous change in both the history of the automotive industry and in the community. With demonstrated competence in computer science, automotive engineering and massive project deployment, the University is in a unique position to participate in the progress of the car industry. As such, the University should take advantage of this technological opportunity by collaborating with industry leaders to push innovative legislation state legalizing driverless cars.

Driverless cars should be legalized, innovated, in Mich.

Race is still an issue

T he 3000 book, Lives and the Efforts of Confessors of Faith: A True History of the Life of John Hus Hus, Bishop of Constance, and John Zell, Bishop of Freiburg, was written in 1509 and 1510, with the primary goal of highlighting Hus' achievements. The book is widely recognized as a major contribution to the study of Reformation-era Christianity. The author, a German theologian and philosopher, was a supporter of Hus and aimed to provide a detailed account of his life and work. The book was published in Latin and has since been translated into several languages, including English and German.

Slavery is not a “blessing in disguise.”

According to Dr. Young, since the days of the British Empire, many other countries have profited off the exploitation of slave labor, and it is time for these countries to acknowledge the injustices of the past. According to him, slavery is an oppressive system that must be dismantled and replaced with a more just and equitable system of labor. The author believes that this is not only a moral imperative, but also an economic one, as the world cannot continue to rely on labor exploitation to fuel economic growth.

FOLLOW DAILY OPINION ON TWITTER

daily staff are in D.C. covering the oral arguments on Affirmative Action at the Supreme Court today. Check out mchicsdaily.com to keep up with the conversation.

---

TWEETWITTER

#barackobama

The debate was an embarrassment, but the Big Bang is a new low.

---

Gas Tunisia in June

Goal: get reach at negotiations.